

THIS IS THE GRISLY SCENE early Tuesday morning as two LSUS students were found brutally murdered on the campus.

Richardson, Teel Stage Panty Raid

By FABULOUS FRANK FORTUNE

Two LSUS instructors, Alex Teel and Duke Richardson, led a group of male students on the first annual panty raid of the girls' dormitory here last night.

The raid, which had been planned for almost seven months, didn't go off as smoothly as expected, however. One reason was that many of the students weren't sure where the dorm was located.

Teel and Richardson met with the enthusiastic group at about 9:15 p.m. in front of the library. With loud speaker in hand, Teel asked that the men refrain from anything that was "out of line," knowing the entire campus security force would be in attendance at the gala affair.

Panty or Bust

The group headed west from the library at about 9:48 p.m., but was soon corrected by Richardson, who sent them east to find the levee. Although not knowing the exact location, the exuberant young men chanted "Panty or Bust!"

At about 12:10 a.m., Teel decided to call off the raid because of failure to find the dorm. He remarked, "I must have misread the new proposal. I thought it said something about a dorm being built."

Richardson Upset

Richardson was really upset after the disappointing night. He stated, "I enjoyed no less than 50 panty raids at college and none were this bad."

The two are not giving up, however. They are now in the process of making long-range plans for another raid. It will take place sometime between September, 1973 and May, 1979. All interested males should register in the Dean's office on June 24, 1973 at 8:14 p.m.

Two LSUS Students Murdered; Strung Up In Parking Lot

By DAVID NANCE

Two LSUS students were brutally murdered late Monday night and left hanging from a light pole in the faculty parking lot by a crude "hangman's noose."

Dead are Jeff Cartwright, 20, and Larry A. Woods, 19. Dr. Stuart DeLee, Caddo Parish coroner, said both deaths resulted from blows to the back of the head, probably caused by some blunt object. DeLee determined the time of death to be between the hours of 11 o'clock Monday night and 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Shreveport Police Department detective William Snow, investigating the incident, commented "The murders were probably committed off campus, and then as a gross joke, the bodies were brought to LSUS and hung from the light pole."

The campus security officer on duty was found unconscious behind the generator building, probably dragged there by the murderer.

Numerous superficial wounds were found on the officer's head, but none even weakened the skull. It looked as though the murderer tried to kill the officer, but the futility of it frustrated him and he gave up.

The murders were discovered by an alert bird-watcher early Tuesday morning, who, from his perch in a tree near the levee, spotted the bodies hanging from the pole. He said "I thought they were bats at first, but the way the old wind kept 'em swayin' there like it did, I got kinda suspicious."

The bird watcher was the same one who spotted the giant capon rising from the earth on the LSUS campus about a year ago.

Investigations are continuing in the matter and detective Snow said all his knowledge and equipment is being used to find the culprits.

Commenting on the murder, Snow said "Death was probably instant and it was definitely a clean job. I couldn't have done better myself. And the hangman's nooses were by far the best I've seen in a long time. All in all I'd say it was a very well done operation. Dastardly, mind you, and evil, evil, evil, but well done."

When asked to comment about the slayings, campus security officer Claude "Smokey" Overlease said "Well, if kids wouldn't do so much hanging around out here, maybe things like this wouldn't happen."

Mr. T. E. Bunny Injured In Hit-Run Accident

T. E. Bunny was injured seriously in a hit-and-run accident early Sunday morning on Morningstar Lane.

Bunny is reported in serious condition at the hospital. His hind legs were broken and his fluffy tail was skinned. Doctor MacDonald is hopeful that he will be able to pull through without permanent damage, but it is not expected.

The report of the accident was turned in by Cheryl Bowen, 8, of 742 Morningstar Lane. According to Miss Bowen, she was looking out of her window when she saw a large white bunny thrown to the side of the road by a speeding blue bicycle. She was unable to tell if the rider was a boy or a girl, but she said the bike was one of the racing models.

As it is too early to tell whether Bunny will come out of the accident unmarred, applications are being taken to fill the position in Room 222 of the Library Building.

Joe Namath To Visit LSUS; To Lend Arm In Passing Seminar

Well, sports fans, in our continuing effort to bring the best to all sports minded students, we are proud to announce the approval of the Dean in having Joe Namath come to us meager students. He is to arrive April 1, and he has already consented to teach everyone of us how to pass.

In an interview on the phone, he said that on his arrival he will have plenty of autographed pictures of himself in action at his world famous casino. However, he said, "I have given all my used footballs to my fourteen children."

Anyone with just a little knowledge of football has heard of Joe and what he represents. Money. He also said that one dollar bills with his photo and autographed by the treasurer of funds will be given away to all students, especially the girls, who for some reason or another seem to always be well represented in his presence.

The interviews and presentations from LSUS students will take place today in the Science Lecture Auditorium at about 1400 a.m. Students will present him a record sheet of grades and as promised, he will show us a positive way to pass.

Another thing Joe is famous for is the way he makes a pass. Every boy, (I'm sure), will definitely want to see this. He also said that he will have a girl with him to use in the demonstration.

That's about it for sports, and remember that a referee with a running nose and smelly feet is built upside down.

LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY IN SHREVEPORT

Pop Music Festival To Be Presented North of Library

A pop music festival, sponsored by SGA, was announced recently by Georgia Scheen, president. The festival, to be held in the field north of the library building, will be free of charge to all LSUS students.

Headlining the program will be performances by Jimi Hendricks, Janis Joplin, the Jefferson Airplane, Santana and Johnny Rivers.

"We are also hoping to get the Byrds and The Rock Foundation," Georgia commented.

The three student parking lots will be available for audience cars although the faculty spaces will be reserved for faculty only.

The festival will be held on the three days directly before final exams.

"We hope to relax the students before their finals," was the comment of Buddy Allums, in charge of the event.

Accommodations will be available for persons staying the entire three days. The snack shack will be open throughout the entire festival and sections of the field will be partitioned for sleeping areas.

"The SGA is hoping a large percentage of LSUS students will participate in the program," Georgia commented.

Free to LSUS students, tickets will cost $1.00 to all other people.

EXCITED LSUS STUDENTS enjoy an impromptu preview of the upcoming LSUS pop festival. The program will be held on the north field of the campus the third week of May.

McKeithen Addresses LSUS Faculty Members

The faculty of LSUS and local educators were addressed at 11 a.m. Monday, March 30 in the Science Lecture Auditorium by Gov. John McKeithen.

When Gov. McKeithen stepped up on the rostrum, pandemonium broke loose as everyone yelled, "We love you John!"

Mayor Clyde Fant reluctantly quieted the group saying, "Even though we would like to keep showing our affection for the Governor, we must listen to his gentle voice."

McKeithen Apologizes

"My dear, dear friends in Northwest La., I have been greatly misunderstood, and I fear that you think I have done you a terrible injustice. I have come at this time to beg and plead your forgiveness. When I, 'Gentle John,' vetoed the plans for LSUS, I was not in my right mind. I had a raging fever the night before, and evidently I was hallucinating; I did not mean to say no for your allocation. I've spent many a sleepless night thinking of you wonderful people up here."

The tears rolled down his face, as he grasped the lectern and bowed his head. "I also owe those fine senators up here an apology. Those boys think that I don't like them, but fellas, I can't show my real feelings toward you, because the rest of the state would be jealous. I can't let you have everything you want."

"And now beloved friends in the North, I have come to remedy by boo-boo. I personally am going to see that you get the money for your new buildings here. The first thing that I am going to do is plan a fund-raising dinner."

Donate Scrap Lumber

The governor even went a step beyond the call of duty; he offered to donate old scrap lumber; nails and fence posts that he had lying around his backyard. These items would make a mighty good fence just in case the cattle stray from across the levee and through the cotton field. "But of course," he said, "with the cattle here, we could save money because the grass wouldn't have to be cut, and it would stay green without having to buy fertilizer."

"Now, there are several small items that I would like you students to enjoy. The first is a small train that makes the rounds of the parking lot every five minutes; this might be a little helpful when it rains, especially to those students that park on the lot closest to Red River.

"The second thing, which you probably won't care for, is liquor and beer in your new student center. There's only one catch though: you may have to furnish your own Cokes and 7-Ups.

Gifts for Faculty

"Now I know you faculty members have been waiting for your little gift. Well, you have so many, many comforts here, that it was hard to choose something for you. Since you look as though you have been working too hard, I plan for a caterer to come in every day and take orders for lunch. Of course, it's all on the house; a free lunch program to go along with your new pay raise.

"Now I want you to know that we really appreciate the economy measures that you have undertaken up here; you are especially to be commended on letting your sick students use the janitor's broom closet instead of providing a first-aid room. I understand that you even save money by tearing up old rags and using them instead of buying a box of band-aids.

New Buildings

"In closing, I would like to say that I hope that all of your new buildings match as these old ones do and blend right in with the scenery as these do.

"I know that there's one little thing you don't understand, but after I explain, I know everything will be all right. The only reason Southern got more money than you folks did is because they have more names on the Dean's list. This means that you students will just have to study harder in order to make the good grades that they did.

Heart in the Right Place

"I realize that I haven't fully made amends for my little mistake, but I just wanted you to know that my heart was in the right place."

As the Governor stepped down from the rostrum and onto the red carpet, Dean Shipp placed a lei of roses around his neck, and Col. Bonifay and Mrs. Dark showered him with rose petals.

Of course, the police had trouble holding back the students who wanted to tear off a souvenir of the Governor's clothes.

Bring Back Saturday Classes!

The LSUS Administration has really pulled a good one. It has abolished Saturday classes from the LSUS system! How such an action could have come about is beyond comprehension. Why, Saturday classes were the greatest thing to hit the LSUS campus since the Snack Shack!

Just think of all the good times Saturday classes have provided. For example, everyone knows what a joy it was to wake up early Saturday morning and get out of his warm bed and go to class in the freezing cold weather. It may not have seemed joyful, but everyone knows cold weather toughens the spirit, and therefore everyone should enjoy getting out in the windy weather and freezing to death.

And just think, after really hanging one on late Friday night, one got up early Saturday morning and on the way to class remembered a test which was scheduled for that day. And as you whipped your car into a U-turn to go back home, you remembered the test was one of those wonderful "no make-up" jobs. This too, toughens the old spirit.

And don't forget those great weekends you planned that went haywire because of your wonderful Saturday classes. All this is to the betterment of your being of course. . . it disciplines you.

And now the LSUS administration has flubbed up by separating us from our beloved Saturday classes. Arise, students! Make yourselves known! Bring back Saturday classes so that we all may once again know the security and peace of disciplined living.

Famed Resort, LSUS Announces Summer Hours

By CHRIS ADAMS

The year-round fun spot of the South, LSUS, announced its summer hours today; the famous resort will be opened every third Thursday, unless it snows, on alternate Wednesdays and even Mondays from 5:15 until 10:36. There will be no curfew this year, except on parties or other festivities if alcoholic beverages (or other intoxicants) are not served.

The world-renowned center of sun offers activities for all people of all ages, etc. There are facilities for every activity visitors may imagine. . . even more if he has a good imagination.

The vast area of invigorating healthfulness originally started as a university in the LSU system, but due to changes made by the radical elements in the university, the school experienced massive study-ins by the enraged student body. They protested, "We've got our rights for a more intellectual atmosphere. Why do we have to have sports, dances, and pop festivals on our campus?" The students also protested the legalization of the selling of beer in the Student Union. "It was bad enough that the teachers had to resort to moonshining to get by, but now the students have to purchase other services to keep their grades up to par."

The LSUS Canal is perhaps the most outstanding attraction in this self-proclaimed University of Sin. The canal offers ski and scuba diving, snorkeling, and surfing. Elegant sailing vessels continuously enhance the beauty of the waterway, and gigantic oceangoing ships dock here year round. Of particular interest are the whaling ships, which at present hold all records for the inland whale capturing feats. The only disappointments possible at this scenic site of scenic sites, the Grand Canal, are the occasional oil slicks and the coral reefs which are dangerous to body surfers at low tide.

But water is not all LSUS has to offer. This is the site of the world's largest football field, says sports director Larry Woods. On the premises is also the enormous Indian Mound, named so for J. Frank Indian who discovered the historical reference on an expedition to view the wide sheep herds in the Sheep Sanctuary of LSUS.

Mountain climbers also enjoy the adventuresome LSUS. To the east of the main parking grounds, the mammoth Levee Peak is located. Climbing to 30 feet, the awesome crag is a threat for the most experienced mountain scaler, especially if he isn't used to climbing on clover.

Endless acreage is devoted strictly to the fast rising sport of kite flying and award-winning professionals are on hand to help you improve your endurance in this fast moving challenge.

The campus camping grounds are designed to help tourists get closer to nature. There is no running water or other luxuries which corrupt the civilized world. Every attempt has been made to keep the area in its natural state as a swamp.

The area also offers hiking expeditions and miles of rambling territory. And the best part of the entire adventure is that it can be obtained for 59 green stamp books, 37 Wheaties box tops, and 106 pop tops from Coors Cans.

In progress now at the LSUS fun spot is the Annual Gar Rodeo, being held in the Grand Canal.

Frogs Being Cheated Out Of Their Land

In this land of freedom, justice, and equality for all, a deplorable situation has come to my attention. Living in poverty, disgust, and mud to say nothing of Coke cans and Cheesee bags are approximately 3,952 residents of the underside of the Snack Shack. These under-privileged beings, brought into this world without the usual niceties of arms and legs, exert enormous inner strength to pull themselves out of the water and into the mud. And what do they come into, but a world that calls them frogs.

These "frogs" were the natural inhabitants to this land and were cheated and deprived of their natural right by the Great White Meany who offered them 24 dead flies for their lands. The frogs also were taken on the contract, or pseudo treaty they signed saying that they would be able to remain on their lands and hunt and fish as they wished. But again the Great White Savage went back on his word. The frogs were sent to various camps away from their natural home lands. They were denied light, and their food supplies sources were tampered with by the campus' Biology Department.

The original herd of three billion frogs is now less than 4,000 with the figure decreasing every hour. The remaining frogs strive and struggle for an existence in their last refuge, under the snack shack. They are being denied all rights, from education to voting, yet no one pays any attention to these first citizens of the world.

Won't somebody listen to their voices croaking in the night? Won't someone answer their plea?

"Slinky Steve" Signs To Play for LSUS

Slinky Steve McDonald, 7-foot-5 All-American guard, has signed a scholarship contract for 2 years to play for the newly-formed LSUS varsity basketball team. He was given a $2.1 million bonus.

Slinky Steve, formerly Shorty Steve, amazingly grew 1½ feet last week shortly after consuming an entire loaf of Wonder Bread. Asked to comment on his phenomenal growth, McDonald said, "Well, the only thing I can figure out is I must have had my "wonder years" a little late. I owe my success to that wonderful little package of bread and the tardiness of my "wonder years."

The scholarship Slinky received was the fastest ever granted a college athlete. (And the largest amount).

The announcement that McDonald, a 7-foot-5 athlete with crew cut hair and neat socks, had picked LSUS over Panola Junior College of the rival Wimpy Basketball Association came at a news conference.

"It is with great pleasure that I announce that Steve McDonald will play college basketball at LSUS," said John Elkins, one of four attorneys who handled the negotiations for McDonald.

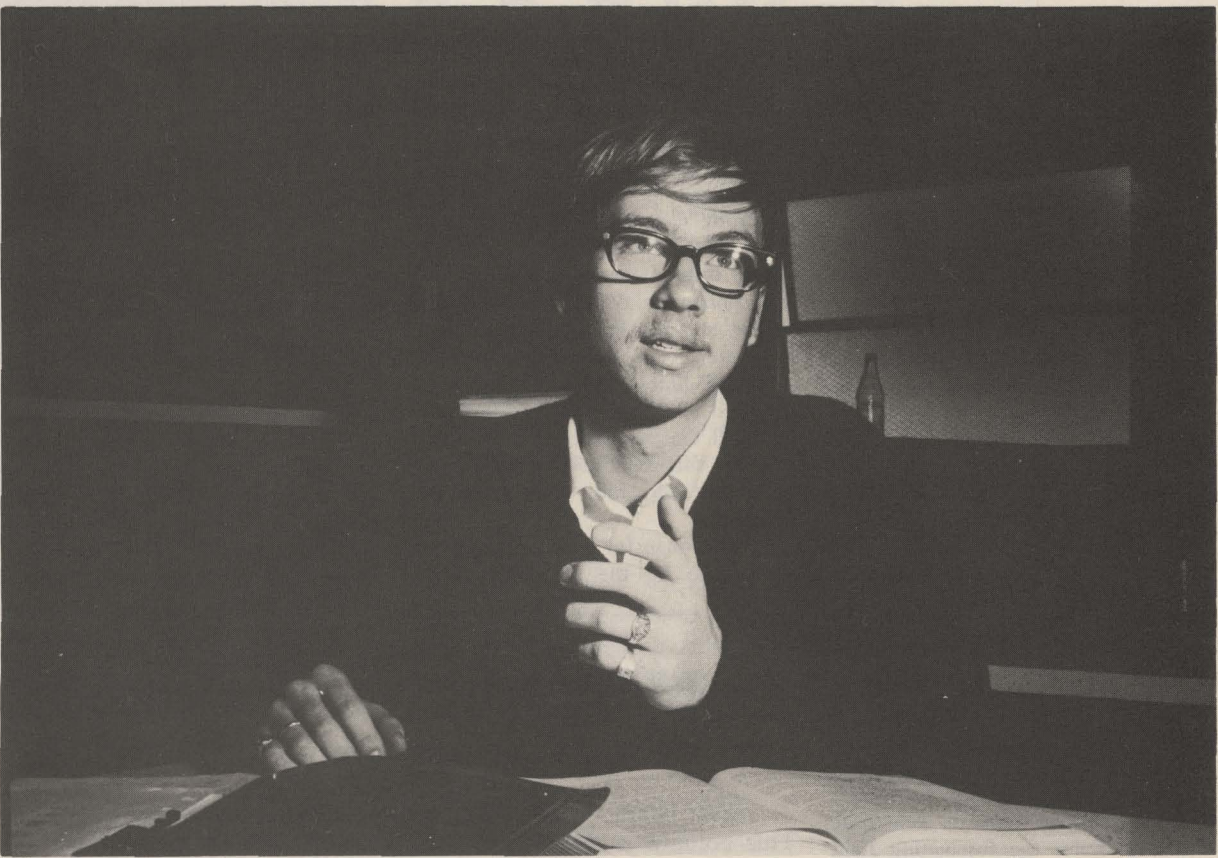

Precise scholarship terms weren't revealed except that it was for a 2 year term.

Dr. James Bates, head of the LSUS Health and Physical Education department said the new basketball team would give LSUS more than just a "glorified high school" image. "Now that we've got a varsity basketball team, who knows what will happen? The sky's the limit. We might even get a domed stadium."

Bates said the team is open to any male LSUS student—"as long as he has to duck his head when he enters the 6-foot-8 door to my office."

NEWLY-ELECTED SGA president Bobby Matkin explains his plans for improvement of campus life. The sophomore physics major was elected by a landslide majority Monday.

Matkin Elected SGA President

Bobby Matkin, sophomore physics major, has been elected new Student Government Association president after former president Georgia Scheen was removed from office for a variety of offenses.

Matkin was elected by a landslide vote Monday and has taken over the SGA office on the third floor of the Science building.

Georgia Scheen, former SGA president was removed from her office over the Easter holidays for what she termed "ridiculous accusations." She was charged with embezzling SGA funds and also with using SGA's helicopter for her own private purposes.

Outlines Plans

Matkin outlined his plans for the rest of the semester and said he has plans to build a coffeehouse to the east of the library and will have big name folk/folk rock singers performing and will also hire local talent to perform. "We want the best for the coffeehouse, and with enough student help, we can really build and decorate it nicely." Matkin said the coffeehouse would be free of charge except for refreshments served.

Matkin also plans to use money allocated to SGA to build the LSUS Health and Recreational Center un-

Goerner, Goodrich Now Producing Whiskey Substitute

By FABULOUS FRANK FORTUNE

"Dr. Joe Goerner and Dr. James Goodrich have been awarded a $138,000 grant for development of their new wonder drink, Aceltysalichromohydro-uptane, which causes one to "really hang one on," as Goodrich promises.

The drink is presently being produced in the LSUS lab. It was originally produced by the two men while they were doing graduate work at Baton Rouge. Goodrich had a small still. . .err, distilling plant set up neatly in the basement of an old abandoned apartment (so no one would steal his formula).

When asked about its taste, Dr.

Goerner replied, "Well, it can never beat scotch and water, but it, on the other hand, by the same token, isn't a bad substitute."

The drink, soon to be released under the "G&G Good Juice" label, is much like eggnog. Goodrich said that it usually tastes much better when one allows it to age, usually 30 or 40 minutes.

derneath the Snack Shack. Matkin said the center would be equipped with an indoor heated swimming pool, small indoor track, gymnasium, and ping pong and pool tables. Matkin said plans were also made to include stereo listening rooms in which students can listen to whatever they want on headphones anytime they want.

Completed in April

"I know these things take time, but we hope to have both the coffee-house and the recreation center finished by mid-April," said Matkin. "During the summer, I plan to have a heli-port built so SGA can land its helicopter near the school. As it stands now, the helicopter is kept at the Municipal Airport, and its rather hard to use when you need it. I mean, what's the good of coming to school in a helicopter when you have to drive 20 miles anyway?" Matkin said.

Three LSUS Students
Contract Food Poisoning

Three LSUS students have been hospitalized as a result of ptomaine poisoning contracted from the "fresh food" in the Snack Shack.

Doctors for all three agreed on the cause of illness as bad horse meat included in the beef stew. They also included the possibility of underdone pork in the stew and therefore the possibility of "the trick," that is, trichinosis.

A spokesman for the food company responsible for the incident said "I regret this occurrence and I will take definite measures to insure that from now on the horsemeat used in the stew is of high quality and not spoiled. However, and I want to make myself very clear, the underdone pork was not, I repeat, was not the food company's fault. The fault lies with the students for under cooking the pork. If they get "the trick," it's not my problem." (The spokesman and company wish to remain unidentified.)

The three students are all in good condition in Schumpert Sanitarium and plan to bring their lunches to school when they return.
